My Earliest memory is also my most tragic. A young Andy sat down eating his evening meal on a warm summers night. My beloved guinea pig in his run, in front of my eyes an owl swoops down and kills it.

First ambition in life was to play for Manchester United, which I still believe is going to happen. After that it was to become a script writer.

At 18 I was planning my gap year, I honestly thought I would finish 6th form go traveling and not come back. 3 months into my travels an overdrawn account and credit card meant it was time to come home.

Many people at Uni don't believe Cheddar even exists, that's why I am Chedz to half the people here. Do love the shire, it has the gorge, crazy golf, few pubs and not much else. Couldn't think of many better places to grow up.

I love Falmouth, it is unique to any other Uni. I do love the occasional visit to my mates at their big city Uni's but you cant beat down here.

Football is my heaven. Made some of my best mates at Uni through football. Sports a key reason why I went for presidency, think there is a lot of change needed here with them.

I Support Manchester United, only due to Beckham being my idol as a kid.

When they announced me as President it was a complete shock, I had a few vodka cokes to calm the nerves and by the time I realised I had won I was mobbed by my mates. Amazing feeling though cant wait to start now.

Fingers crossed changing quite a few things. More needs to be given to the students. More sports, more teams, more and bigger events. I want it to be made public the topics that have been discussed in the meetings. Let the students know what is going on.

There should be free cash machines on Tremough campus and a cash point at Woodlane.

Running for President is much more stressful than I thought. You feel like your annoying people the amount you keep telling them to spread the word. Always putting posters up and trying to get known.

I ran my 1st ever marathon last year and will be doing the same again this year. The feeling you get from completing it is incredible. Still trying to sort out my charity I'm going to run for. I like to try and go for a run 3-4 times a week, I enjoy it more than finding it a chore. Also being in Falmouth gives you the chance to run along the costal paths.

Being Andy Edmonds is Like? A good laugh, love my life. Like to just look on the bright side of life. Tend to have a smile on my face 99% of the time. Like to think I can talk and make friends with anyone.

After I'm gone people will say, that I made there time at university amazing. Just want people to remember me as the best president there has been so far.
